

SARONIC GULF

The cluster of the Saronic Islands is located in the heart of the Saronic Gulf, which is situated between the prefecture of Attica and the eastern side of the geographical district of the Peloponnese, and comprises amongst them the following exquisite islands: Aegina, Poros, Hydra. The Saronic islands have an important history and an interesting tradition of many centuries, as they were inhabited from the prehistoric era, during which they were greatly developed. The much-frequented island of Aegina with the picturesque settlements, the exceptionally noble island of Poros with the unique natural beauty and the fine tourist substructure and the cosmopolitan island of Hydra which has been declared a landmark, compose the irresistibly attractive icon of the Saronic Island cluster.
